KEEP PLANTING VEGETABLES

• • •

Too much stress cannot be laid on continuous planting of the standard vegetables like lettuce, radish, beans carrots, beets, corn etc. These taste much better when they just begin to reach proper maturity. Beans, lettuce, corn and such things begin to get tough if left too long. In mostparts of Canada it is quite possible to keep planting many vegetables right up to mid-July.

Making Most of Space.

Where vegetable garden space is limited it is best to stick to smaller and heavy cropping things like beets carrots, spinach, beans etc. All of these can be grown, if necessary, in rows no more than 12 inches apart and a 10 foot row will supply many delicious meals. Slightly more room between the rows will make cultivation easier and also give a better chance to keep down weeds.

Space can be saved with larger growing vegetables by following a few tricks of the experienced gardeners. Take tomatoes, for example. If left alone to grow the natural way, these plants will need a full 24 inches at least each way and, better still, 30 inches or a yard. However, if they are staked, they can be grown about 15 to 18 inches apart and better earlier, and cleaner fruit will be produced. Stakes should be about 6 feet long and firmly driven at least a foot in the soil close to the plant. All side shoots are nipped off and growth confined to a single shoot. Care must be taken not to pinch off flowers which will come at every joint in the main stem. The latter should be tied loosely to the stake with soft twine or raffia, about every foot.

Melons, squash and other climbing or trailing vegetables, or perhaps we should say fruits, will take up less valuable space if planted around the outside of the main garden .They can trail over paths, or even fences Most of these things, however, require as much sun as possible ,as well as good rich open soil. Incidentally around the outside of the garden and especially the North and west side is the place for fruit trees. Here they are out of the way and they will not shade the garden.

Spread out Annual Flowers

With bedding plants like petunias, asters, cosmos, marigolds etc., most amateurs make the same mistake as they make with shrubs and trees—they plant them too close together. This is not only expensive but it results in less bloom and poor, spindly growth.

It is really surprising how much space a well-grown petunia, nasturtium or any other of these plants will cover. Instead of putting the larger sorts 6 to 8 inches apart the experts advocate a foot or even two. This will allow easier cultivation which, of course, is vital, and encourage the plant to spread and grow sturdily. In a few weeks these annuals will have occupied all the space between.For very long beds such as those along driveways petunias, zinnias, cosmos, big marigolds etc. are often planted in wavy rows far enough apart to permit tractor cultivation for the first week or two. By mid July they will be making a wondeful show.
